

Emergency Management: Public Private Partnership Benefits Ohioans

Russell J. Decker, Ph.D.
Deputy Director
Ohio Emergency Management Agency

First Things First

“There’s no way government can solve the challenges of a disaster with a government-centric approach.
It takes the whole team.”

Craig Fugate, Administrator Federal Emergency Management Agency

Ohio Public Private Partnership

Enhanced communication between government and business

- Provide two-way information flow about incident, resources
- Provide information that will help businesses get back up and running after a disaster

OP3 Successes

- 2015 Winter Storm/Power Disruption
 - AEP Ohio, DP&L
- Winter of 2013-14 Propane shortage

- Toledo Water Incident August 2014
 - Anheuser Busch, Kroger, CVS, Walgreen
Walmart

We all want to avoid ...

We also want to avoid ...

Giving out free water in front of your stores.

We will focus on water distribution to special populations who are unable, or can't afford to buy water.

You can focus on your supply chain and have extra supplies in the community for those who can get out and buy water.
